So let's get started. One way of getting started with practicing German is to listen to news broadcasts each day either on TV or radio. Try to find programs that are different from the norm. These can be found in the American Forces Network, Armed Forces Radio Network, National Public Radio, Voice of America or Deutsche Welle. Your local KLX-FM or XEIV-TV should be able to guide you in tuning into these stations, because they broadcast programs around the world in several different languages. English is the international language of business and commerce so once you get used to speaking German fluently you will also want to learn English so that you can communicate with your German neighbors at home and abroad. The internet is an excellent source for learning new words and phrases. Many language websites can also help you with learning and speaking English. When searching for sites, you will find many that provide the text or dialogues to movies, training movies or even TV ads. You can use these as a means of practicing your German skills by reading the dialogue out loud and repeating it after it has been read. It is also a good idea to find some material on topics of interest to you such as travel, shopping, consumer information, FAQs and much more. For those who want to move ahead in their quest for understanding German language skills, we have developed a set of CDs that will assist you in reading and understanding what is being said in a short story or news item. For those interested in learning some of the basics of German grammar, we provide a grammar chart as well as some worksheets to help you understand some of the basic rules.
